I have some Apache2 websites which are spawning from 50-100 worker processes as the load increases. This is hurting the servers and because these are all running on the same hardware, I'm looking to take out the initial startup of all the processes. I know I can change the maximum number of threads to 10 via the httpd.conf or similar, but I want to have the software automatically spawn worker processes based on the CPU and memory resources available. Can this be done? A: You can use the 'scheduler' module for this. It should be easy to setup. You can read about it in the apache docs here: Characterization of Rana localis (Gall-Schoop, 1907) (Ophidia: Ranidae) with reference to its taxonomy and the status of Rana sagra as a junior synonym. Rana sagra Boulenger, 1887 was designated as a synonym of Rana localis Gall-Schoop, 1907 by several authors. However, the validity of this synonymy has not been assessed. We examined specimens of R. localis deposited at the National Zoological Park (London, U.K.), Zoological Museum of University of Copenhagen (Copenhagen, Denmark), the Texas A&M University a1d647c40b

Put down your pails of lukewarm water and dust off those mothballs: Amazon is now officially open for business in China. The online retailer, which had previously declined to expand into mainland China, launched a beta version of its service here last week. When people make the headlines these days, it's usually because they've done something remarkably stupid. Take this week, for example: a homeless man allegedly stole a police officer's wallet, which contained credit cards and other personal identification. But the suspect turned out to be an ingenious criminal who knew exactly what he was doing, and you have to hand it to him for figuring it out. From mobsters to techies, from Playboy Playmates to criminals, celebrities aren't safe in the hands of the Internet. Here are some of the boldest-stroke crimes. From Michael Jackson's lawyer to the Manster himself, the Internet has given us a few moments of fame, but it has also destroyed some of our lives. Next week the newly elected President Barack Obama will name his new cabinet. Here's a roundup of who they'll likely be bringing with them to Washington. Among the names that came up during the long campaign and the subsequent three debates: Cindy McCain, Ben Bernanke, Marco Rubio, and Colin Powell. Amazon recently launched its new smartphone, the Kindle Fire, in the U.S., but it hasn't been available in China just yet. The device is based on Android 2.3, is made mostly of plastic, and has a 7-inch
