Finaldata Enterprise 3.0 Serial 104 finaldata Enterprise, finaldata Enterprise 3.0 If you choose to use policy mode, use it to generate all .less and print all recent events. Configuring Shared Connections To configure shared connections, use the setenv proxy command on the console (see Section 9.2.5.3.2). This is the easiest way to set up a process. When deploying a process, highlight the hard drive where the process will run. The setwindow hprof command used for this is the command to create a process that will run when the setup process starts. Depending on the system and your needs, you can use commands that will determine which external devices will be included in the process and that data entered through them will be deleted. In the simplest case that you will need for your environment, you can create a separate process to interact with an external device, such as a modem, and give it the name dhcpd - since this is the process that your web server will use to access the Internet. The created process will control the connection to the remote computer (if such a file is saved) and interact with yours. In this case, the process connects to the modem using an internal rule that it should only read files assigned to it. The server must also create a rule for the network connection to the remote computer. Connecting an external device (default) To add one of the external devices, you can use the setenv proxypath command. This mechanism allows you to change the external IP address, subnet mask, name and other parameters of the proxypath networking program. The subnet mask and server name parameter settings will be identical to the parameter settings contained in the smb_cmd.dll file. To work with them, run the following commands: setenv dlhname smb1|dnc.lan | sort | grep -o:smb1 -o smb2 setenv dhconfig directory smb:/var On Windows Server 2003, you can also add the geomap2 option to this procedure. This is a small addition that serves to display images received from a remote computer and allows you to limit the number of sessions. If you want to connect a device with a specific data encryption method, set the process in the parameters (see section 9-2.2
