A: I don't know why this is happening but I just discovered that if you create a raw image from a .jpeg file or even a transparent.png file, it works as if it was a raw.jpg file. The Transparency works, the .png file can be displayed properly, and the .jpg image can also be played on your media player. Here is a screen of the .jpg file created from a transparent.png file: The inflammation-based microvascular permeability index is associated with impaired hematopoietic recovery in pediatric cancer patients. Low arteriovenous oxygen content difference (a-vO<sub>2</sub>) is associated with poor cancer-related outcomes. Preclinical evidence suggests the permeability of the microvascular circulation could be a determinant of a-vO<sub>2</sub>. However, the association of the microvascular permeability index (MPI) with hematopoietic recovery in pediatric cancer patients is unclear. We conducted a retrospective review of children with solid tumors admitted to a comprehensive cancer center who received umbilical cord blood (UCB) transplantation between July 2010 and January 2015. We determined the prognostic value of the MPI and a-vO<sub>2</sub> in predicting outcomes in these patients. A total of 50 patients had UCB transplantation, including 20 with acute myeloid leukemia, 11 with neuroblastoma, 9 with Wilms' tumor, 9 with retinoblastoma, and 3 with other solid tumors. The MPI was calculated using the a-vO<sub>2</sub> and the hematocrit. The median a-vO<sub>2</sub> was 12.4 mm Hg (interquartile range [IQR] 10.2 to 18.3), and the median MPI was 0.21 (IQR 0.15 to 0.31). There was an inverse correlation of a-vO<sub>2</sub> with MPI (r=-0.70, P e24f408de9
