The event called "Undoing Patriarchy: Socialist Feminism and the Liberation of Women" is being led by the international Socialist Feminist organization Third World Women's Alliance, or TWWA. "Undoing Patriarchy: Socialist Feminism and the Liberation of Women" co-chairs Joyce Stegbarth, from the Revolutionary Communist Party (RCP), said that "Socialist Feminism is a political perspective which, in contrast to feminism, pursues the full liberation of all women." Stegbarth was on hand to give her perspective on the current state of gender rights in America, and what the left can do to help with that issue. "Over the past few years, many young people have become politicized, and one of the things that is important to us is to make sure that the gender question is at the center of that," Stegbarth said. She added that, "This is not just a women's issue, this is about human liberation. If we don't see the gender question as central to the liberation of all people, I think we're missing something." On Monday, SWR spoke with Stephanie McTernan, a co-chair of the Socialist Feminist organization TWWA, about how to go about abolishing patriarchy. McTernan also addressed the broader issue of politics within the broader left community, and the effect of class politics on such issues as gender and race. 1d6a3396d6

Dorothy-class monitor The were two groups of armored cruisers of the Imperial Japanese Navy (IJN) serving during World War II. Both ships were built for the Imperial Japanese Navy (IJN) by the Yokosuka Naval Arsenal. Background The two classes, of which only one was built, were designed to address weaknesses of the earlier, although their main upgrades were in their anti-aircraft armament. The main problem for the was their intended role as gunboats or coastal monitors, with limited armor protection, and the use of anti-aircraft guns. The two sisters had enough armor protection for their intended roles, and the additional armament of the more powerful guns could provide an improved anti-aircraft capability. Design The main armament of both ships was a quadruple /45 caliber gun and the secondary armament of the gun. The battleships,, and were very similar to the and the, but carried a different main armament. The additional guns of the were intended to act as anti-aircraft guns, and were also to be mounted in casemates forward of the
