A: As you can see from your edit, the only real problem is the ellipsis following a long name. So I created a control that removes the ellipsis: unit ControlsTest; interface uses Windows, Messages, SysUtils, Variants, Classes, Graphics, Controls, Forms, Dialogs, StdCtrls; type TOctViewer = class(TCustomControl) private FText: string; public constructor Create(AOwner: TComponent); override; destructor Destroy; override; published property Text: string read FText write FText; end; class procedure TOctViewer.Create(AOwner: TComponent); var R: TRect; begin inherited; FText := ''; R := Rect(ClientWidth - Length(FText), ClientHeight, ClientWidth, ClientHeight); Move(FText, R.Left + 3, R.Right); end; procedure TOctViewer.Destroy; begin FText := ''; inherited; end; end.

This is activated for the SpinEdit in your example as follows: SpinEdit1.Style := SpinEdit1.Style - [seEllipsis]; The code for the control can be used as-is, or can be made more robust by changing the constructor to constructor TOctViewer.Create(AOwner: TComponent); begin inherited; FText := ''; Style := Style - [seEllipsis]; end; If you want the ellipsis to be a fixed percentage, say 3%, then it could be determined as follows: constructor TOctViewer.Create(AOwner: TComponent); begin inherited; FText := ''; Style := Style - [seEllipsis, sePer]; end; procedure TOctViewer.DoLayout; var R: TRect; Per: integer; begin inherited; if Style [seEllipsis, sePer] then return; if

StyleControls V1.5 And More. The present invention relates to a vehicle brake device. A vehicle brake device includes a first electromagnet that generates a magnetic field in response to electric current supplied thereto. A second electromagnet is moved by the magnetic field of the first electromagnet. A damper mechanism is interposed between the second electromagnet and a wheel brake to dampen brake wheel torque that is generated by the second electromagnet. A sensor is provided to detect slip of the wheel brake. A motor-driven feedback device applies the electric current to the first electromagnet. See, for example,
