More By Lisa Mascaro, AP Next week: Democrats will hold their primary in South Carolina. STROUDSBURG, Pa. — A police blotter is usually a mundane document, the typical listing of criminal arrests and misdeeds, used by police to keep close tabs on the bad guys. However, when that document points to an obvious problem with voting rights, or one of the most contentious candidates entering the race and the nearly guaranteed lengthiest primary campaign in history, you have to wonder if the writing was on the wall. More By Brandy McDonnell, AP When it comes to health care, the Democrats would like to make one thing clear: They're not waiting around for President Donald Trump and his party to repeal "Obamacare" and put back in place a system crafted in Washington. More By Amy Sherman, AP Social-media companies that are rushing to profit from the 2020 presidential election are under pressure to police their platforms and make them safe from bias. With social-media giants like Facebook, Twitter, Google, YouTube and Amazon all holding rallies this year, issues of election integrity and policing improper content are front and center.
