2048 is a tile-based puzzle platformer game, the product of the creative minds at Glu. In 2048, the player's goal is to merge blocks of the same color by dragging them together. Merging adjacent blocks creates new, larger blocks, while keeping blocks apart makes them disappear. The only tools at the player's disposal are a grabber and a shrinker. Merged blocks must be separated before they can be merged again. All I know is that this game is a masterpiece! It was chosen by Apple as their Game of the Year for iPhone (They even included a Review with this game on their video). The title is 2048 and it is about merging 2048s to get higher by dragging the 2048s together. Download App A Tap & Drag game. Easy to learn. Very addictive, and entertaining game. You should not play this if you are not willing to give up on your screen! The challenge is to merge the blocks of the same color. Each block can be split into 2 or 4 different colors. You will need to use the arrow keys or your gestures to drag the blocks together to form one big block. The game ends once the last block has been placed. Masses should take it to the next level. other comments Tired of the same apps, coming and going, so many tons of shitty apps only keeping up at best with the standard even before update. I wanted something a bit different. Needed an app that I could easily do something new every day. And I wanted to have fun. So I made this. There are a few apps similar, in a concept different to mine. But they all take more or less the same path. The user guides only tell you how to do the very limited stuff. And then you are on your own. Now I have something I am proud of, and can be proud of. I also want to share my experience. There may be bugs and there may be imbalances. So feedback is also welcome. Feel free to ask any question, also new players I will try to answer your questions. What I want to do is do something, for example make sure it's useful for the players and not the other way around. And to try to make an app that is constantly fun. I like that app so much that I do all of my work in it. I wish that I could do something for myself like this every day. This app is a "tool for being creative". So I am going to explain a bit more what I'm doing here. Festival Boss is not an app that's supposed to help you become a star. It's an app that will help you be creative. So that you have fun and get bored. And for me that's a unique skill. So I want to build this skill and then export that in my own games. The app has several different ideas. For example that you should be able to upload, download and share music. That makes it possible to get the music from the first app to the second and make it play in the third app. Other apps let you to invite friends. But only with a specific message. That may be not cool in a festival app. That's why you can only invite people if you have a party or event there. So if I ask you to get 100 people together for a party, that may not be fun in general, but it is cool if there's some music, and I can ask for 100 people to get a party going. But I do not want to create that here. So how does it

What's new in Loop Hero:

Deck Y'all, it's finally Winter! It's time for the SoloCard Deck Review and all we can say is, we are excited! Winter is a unique time for the card game. Not only is there tons of shiny new stuff coming out, but a cold blast of frigid air makes us excited because as soon as the Winter promo cards start coming out, it is a great opportunity for lots of new players to try it out and experience the wonderful game for the first time. Summer may be over, but the season of Winter has yet to be introduced! Yay! The new Winter promo cards have just started to arrive in boxes and retail stores. If you see them, grab them. These are the best to me because this is the time of year to get to practice the deck building skills you'll need in the new deck. What you'll get from the first batch of cards are your essentials. You can go off and make only one change from the three (or four) you'll get from the first set and that one change will be a massive game changer... (more on this later). The cards are set up in two categories, first are Commons which make up the bulk of the deck, and those are mostly commons and rares. Then we get to the Promos which are mostly one colors, and they are mostly Common cards that bring in some more diversity to the deck. Most of the Promos are mono-colored so if you see a card like the Purifying Fire, it is likely that card is a rare that promotes the Fire type along with colors like Green and White. The typical debate I see in the SoloCard community is how mana-intensive this new deck is. If you have played many solitaire card games like Strip Poker, then the new deck is quite possibly the most mana-intensive deck in the game at this time. Now if you just want to play cards like you have been playing, then maybe not, but if you build this into your game, you will surely have a blast. That is why we are going to review how the new cards fit in and how you should build your deck. Building a Winter Wonderland Deck Now, as I said earlier, you can change up the cards but what is a prize with one purchase? Make one change. Make one change, and we know that those promo versions of the items are not going to be enough in the
