How do I use a function from a dll in a webform using C# How do I use a function from a dll in a webform using C#. I have a DLL called api.dll. I'm trying to use the dll in a webform so I can call the function ExampleFunction(). I tried to add a reference to the dll. I'm not sure what I'm doing wrong. I'm getting an error when I run the program "Error 1 The type or namespace name

'ExampleFunction' could not be found (are you missing a using directive or an assembly reference?)" If anyone has any insight, thanks. A: If you're talking about referencing the API DLL in a web application, you simply add a reference in your web application project to it, and use it the same as any other class library you reference in your web application project. However, if you're talking about using the function from within the DLL, you'll need to reference it using the using keyword. For example: using api; //...

ExampleFunction()); If you can't directly find the API function in your web project, then you can run a command-line test where you build your web project and use reflection to locate the function. A: If you can't find it directly in your ASP.NET project, you may need to use Reflection. Here's a quick example using the IEnumerable.FirstOrDefault() extension method. 0cc13bf012
