Timothy and the Mysterious Forest has an "old school" style with some modern-age ideas. A mix of Game Boy graphics (heavily inspired from The Legend of Zelda: Link's Awakening) along with meta-narrative, stealth system and action combat with a high difficulty level. The game mixes elements from adventure/exploration games with puzzle and stealth: exploration, reading and keeping a slow pace is the best tactic. Three different endings! High difficulty level is the base: Timothy is basically defenceless and dies with a single touch from enemies or traps. Direct combat and stealth can be mixed. Grab & throw: specific items can be grabbed and thrown onto enemies to kill them instantly. Intelligent enemies moves using patterns and normally patrol their area. Timothy, a common child, wants to save his grandfather from certain death. The old man fell ill and he's now fighting for his life. Timothy, who loves his grandfather very much, decides to take a risky journey to the infamous Mysterious Forest. Legends speak of a magic mushroom able to cure any disease that grows into the forest. Timothy bravely begins his journey to find the magic mushroom. The world is full of ruins, graveyards and tombstones, caves, swamps and weird characters: every place is made to look wild, abandoned and dangerous. Except for Timothy's grandfather, most characters are often mean or clearly driven by not-so-nice feelings. Reception Media support A free demo version of the game is available on Bandai Namco's website, playable on any computer with Windows XP, Windows Vista or Windows 7. Timothy and the Mysterious Forest has a strong relationship with the Nintendo Switch. The game was released on Nintendo's new platform on November 1, 2019 and within a day had more than 1,000 sales. Within a week it had sold almost 2,000 units in Japan. According to Nintendo, the game sold 21,032 units in its first week in Japan, making it the 13th best-selling game in that country. Heart&Slash;Heart, Monarch Burger is getting a bar inside. The Birmingham-based burger chain, famed for the use of 'secret sauce', says plans are afoot to transform the old Mercury Court, Birmingham, into a bar. The burger chain sees this as the next step in a grand gastronomic adventure it has been on for nearly 10 years. Owner Pat Wilder told Birmingham Live: "We have always been a burger bar but we realised that it was time to move on. "The vision was always that it would be a gastropub/bistro type of a place. The way that has transformed is right down to our new bar manager Sav who is from the same background of that walkabouts and markets at street level that you see all around Europe. "They are the walks that are going on for street food and for drinks to be carried out onto the street. "We are primarily a burger house but we know that not everyone loves burgers and we want to now do more." This means a full menu of drinks including sandwiches, salads and — for the true adventurer — a full range of beers, wines and spirits. It is the latest twist on the burger chain, which opened its first restaurant in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, in 2002 before heading across the border for shops in Ireland and eventually the UK. Belfast TelegraphWaterproof textile coatings are already known that utilize a latex binder. These latex-treated articles are commonly used in the clothing industry to provide waterproofing in well-recognized applications such as the protection of shoe soles, the protection of sportswear, and the protection of textile fibers, such as the protection of denim. The waterproof quality of these articles, however, is limited to articles which are coated with a coating on the cloth prior to use. Coatings applied directly onto a textile substrate are often less weather-resistant than coatings applied to the surface of the textile, and the resultant coating may not be fully as water repellant as desired. Moreover, coatings applied to the fibers of the textile product can interfere with dyeability or other
