First problem is here you try to convert a PDF file with 16 pages per sheet to a EPS file. This should be done by MultiCellDef[{ }, showPdfCell["Foo.pdf"]] which will show the PDF cell in a nice way to export it as EPS file. The other issue is that you use the AcroForm to get the pages number, but there is no PDF file with that title in your file list. You might be trying to export your PDF to an.eps where you don't have the page 13. pdf = Import[""]; used this to get the pages number. m = Import[""][[13, 1, 2]]; m Import::nofiles: File C:/Users/Bob/.m$TECH_library/pdf/Test.eps has fewer pages than the original file. >> Resolution: Append your file to the list like this. list = {Import[""][[7, 1, 2]], m, pdf, Import[""][[13, 1, 2]]} Then change your code to look like this. Export["C:\\Users\\Bob\\Desktop\\Temp\\page13.eps", Map[ShowPdfCell[#, ShowCellLabel -> False] &, list]] . I was delighted to meet Georgie's uncle, Sean, who turned out to be a charming retired couple, Michael and Karen, who brought their own friend, Jay, to play Scrabble with us. Jay won at the game, though it was hard to read his hand when it wasn't face up. Sarah's friend, Jana, 1cdb36666d
