In the world of The Falconeer, a survival shooter with RPG elements, you must pilot your flying craft across the treacherous skies of The Great Ursee and find a way to bring order back to the skies. You must survive in a universe where the forces of good and evil are in a constant and ever-shifting battle for complete dominance. Brave the relentless forces of chaos in an immersive campaign that rivals the best action experiences ever made. The world of The Falconeer is filled with mystery, where the destiny of humanity is often shaped by chance occurrences. Find out how you can decide the course of events, as all actions from the start of the game affect your character’s future. There are many types of weapon to equip on your player’s spacecraft, with numerous weapons and abilities to choose from. Equip different types of weapon to adapt to the situation at hand. Amongst your arsenal, you’ll find a variety of common and rare weapons, as well as aerial, ground and hand-to-hand combat styles. Harness the training of a large cast of characters to help you gain access to previously inaccessible areas and mission objectives. Discover what they can offer you and equip them with equipment to boost their stats. Have fun and enjoy the game!

Q: What programming language is good for a Web application that integrates in my desktop? I'm making a Web application that has two modes. In the first mode the application uses a scripting language, for example Javascript for parsing and generating stuff. For example, I'm generating and parsing stuff based on a spreadsheet with dynamic forms. In the other mode, I'm using WPF or Java to render things. My question is: what are the best languages for these two modes? My idea is: Java/WPF for the first mode and Javascript or other programming language for the second one. A: I would say a combination of JSP and Javascript is a great solution for integration (I mean, the way you have described it). For the Javascript mode, you can also run some tasks with Node.js or Rhino. Regarding Java, it's not very well-suited for this kind of integration, since it's not as "HTML-like" and will probably make a lot of things more complicated. A: I would go with a combination of Javascript and HTML5. In Javascript I'd build the front-end components, and AUTHOR'S NOTE: This guide covers all areas of the game. However, this guide does not go in-depth with any specific combat or storytelling element. Instead, you can read more about these aspects of the game in their respective section of the Guidebook. The following is a small selection of each regions' locations:

Eastern Region: The eastern region is full of perilous lands filled with equally hazardous monsters. To avoid them you'll need to hide in the swamps, valleys and other settlements found throughout the region. Enemies such as griffons, sharx, morsnar, lopys and shubs make it difficult to avoid them altogether, but you can use the terrain to your advantage, using rocky cliffs and chasms to cover your retreat. Take time to familiarise yourself with the region's layout and you should be able to explore it freely without being overwhelmed by too many enemies.

Towns: Ampora, Apacotta, Zarac, Dvarru, Karomia, Rathnila, and Baitnila. Players must leave Ampora by the northeast exit, and reach Baitnila via a red minimap marker. The other towns are reachable by following other small red markers. Why is there a treehouse in the middle of Ampora? The treehouse is a base of operations for the Kalistas, which means "The Soldiers". The Kalistas was once a peaceful faction, but were corrupted by the Kunchee, who corrupted the trees by making them into a source of food. As a result, the Kalistas have had no choice but to start becoming more aggressive. The treehouse, however, can be reached by following the western path, behind the remains of the treehouse itself. How can I escape the Kalistas? The Kalistas are entirely separate from the rest of the game. A way out can be found by heading west of Ampora, near a large tree. Alongside this tree is a small grave for the person who once stood there. Explore this grave, then find the stone door nearby. When opened, you will find yourself in a huge cavern. Head north, and you will find the door to the Kalistas's base.

Southwest Region: The southwestern region of The Great Ursee is a lush, beautiful area of mangrove swamps, misty forests and crystal rivers. Accessible via the southern exit from Ampora, this region features the twilight castle,

=====Welcome to the Town of Falconeer, where girls can earn their brooches by running or serving as a bartender. There's a great chance to meet and earn a diamond rating (better than the current public "diamond rating") if you can keep young bloods and women happy. This guide is about doing that in Falconeer specifically, and selecting which bartenders will provide the best return on your time and money.I. General TipsWhile it is bad to spend time running down a drink when you can have a drink yourself without a bar tab, you can still maintain a high d-rating if you run and serve as a bartender like the pros! Run down drinks as fast as possible but stop if any appears to be a complete fluke. If you keep a running g-rating up it will increase faster and better as well. You can avoid hitting 1's and 2's by buying only Green Bicon on the bar. If you don't know what that is or where to get it, you can sell any 4's or 5's for a small amount of cash in the Silver Barrel in Red Dock, and buy Green Bicon from the diamond up seller and re-sell it for a small profit. If you do not find 4's or 5's when you arrive at a tent, do this part as soon as you have a 2 g-rating or higher. You can earn diamond ratings quickly by drinking 5's and 4's under 2 g-rating. When you have a patron, be sure to do this immediately! Make sure they add 'pinch of salt' to their drink and that you make sure they aren't running out on tips at the end of the evening. While it is tempting to take the money for yourself, a better choice is to double the money and tip the person instead. If you take the money, your d-rating will lower, and if you run out of money you may become broke and low on d-rating. After you serve a drink you are by definition a bartender who must wait under a certain amount of time before you can run to the next customer and serve another drink, to prevent bumming. However, if your customer is distracted and appears to be disinterested in drinking, chances are you can walk away for 15-20 seconds before the order is cancelled. You can use this to double the income of a good customer and tip you the boss for your hard work. Tip as much as possible! It will prevent you from joining the low

Notes: Stronghold of Heroes is an expanded version of Stronghold 3 for Windows, Mac and Linux. It features a huge array of updates, improvements, fixes and expansions. Currently it has no final release date. The last version I managed to obtain was an early beta 2 build (5.0.1.19280) for Windows. It seems this beta had many of the changes made in the final release. If anyone finds a build (or patch) for the final release, please let me know. For the current version of the Stronghold 3
