Game Master: Nicole L. Williams 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. Game Over: The player with the most points at the end of the game wins. The player who dies first loses.

The Castle Players: 1 (up to 2) Time: 45 minutes to an hour

Players split into two teams. Leader: One team member will play the role of the "Game Master." The Game Master has an advantage over the rest of the players, because the Game Master can go into the castle and come out again at any time. The Game Master can also stop the game whenever he or she wants. The Game Master only makes decisions regarding what the players see inside the castle. The Game Master decides at the beginning of the game how many castles there are and where they are. He or she also decides how many players there are and what is needed to win. The second team member will be a player. All players in this team are forced to stick together and fight off monsters. Players do not know who is on their team, but they do know how to play. Players in the second team cannot go into the castle, and they cannot tell the other players what they see in the castle. They only know what the Game Master says, and they are not allowed to leave the outside part of the castle. The first player to get to the last castle and leave the castle without being attacked by monsters wins.

Game Goal The goal of the game is to complete the tour of the 13 castles, and to be the last player to leave the final castle alive. Monsters: To win the game, players must kill monsters. Players may have a disadvantage in trying to do this. First, players may not be aware of where monsters are, because no player can go into the castle. Second, if a player gets too close to a monster, it will steal the player's heart. (Once the monster has stolen the player's heart, the player cannot control the player anymore and becomes an obedient servant of the monster. All the monster's decisions are the player's decision. This is the player's only action, and all monsters in the castle will obey the player's decision.) To make things a little more difficult for
