Everyone feels pain, but everyone is unique in the way he or she feels pain. In this section I would like to be explicit about what I mean by "pain" and "feeling pain." Pain You feel some sort of pain when there is a cut or laceration or injury on your body. This occurs because the injury has damaged an internal organ (heart, kidney, or liver), or damaged a nerve or some other part of your body. There are different types of pain that you may experience because of the different locations of your injuries. These types of pain include pressure pain (the physical sensation of being squeezed or pinched), pain
