Let's play Magical Hearts! Magical Hearts Rules The object of the game of Magical Hearts is to be the first player to be able to match all of his or her cards. To do this, there is a sequence of moves that must be made. The moves make use of the last two cards, a mother and a father, which are played when the player is in his or her final turn. The player first has the option of playing either the mother or the father, and they can only be played with one of the two. If you make the right sequence, you are able to match all of your cards and you win the game. If you don't, you are out of the game. The board consists of squares, and in each square, there is a mother and a father. The mother cards are number 1, 2, 3, and 4, and the father cards are number 5, 6, 7, and 8. In the initial position, which is just the first turn, player one plays the mother, or the first card in the sequence, and player two plays the father, or the second card. There are three other positions: the left, middle, and right-hand children positions. The child cards are 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and the last card, the mother or the father, is played in these positions. These child cards, as you might expect, match their position. You move clockwise around the board, just like in GO. When the player's turn comes up, the player can place a card face down on the board. A face-down card is a mother or a father. You can move as many cards as you want, but you have to end your turn on the card that's farthest away from you, and that card has to be a mother or a father. You can only move once. What is the sequence to get to that card? There is a match-up, just like in GO, to make the sequence. The numbers on each card, from 1 to 8, correspond to where you must go, starting with the smallest 0cc13bf012
