I like to take 3D laser scans of the beach and other places and feed them into my first-ever web app, Beachfinder. The app lets you use any device to find the real-time location of any number of laser-scanned points in a location you've chosen (it's free and you can even create your own points). I've always been a developer, but not much time to actually develop since I've been working in the Solar Trade for the past two years. I'm working on the next big project, which is a web app that will let you search the beach for these scanned points. The main focus will be on general image processing, but I'd also like to make it a .NET/Silverlight app so that it'll run on the iPhone as well as the Windows Phone.

The following is working as expected: var server = require('mongodb').Server; server.connect(uri, function(err, server) { var db = server.getDB('blog_db'); db.username = 'root'; db.password = '...'; db.dbname = 'blog_db'; db.collection('posts', function(err, posts) { posts.insert({title: 'Test', date: new Date(), category: 'test'}, function(err, post) { if (err) console.log(err); if (post) console.log(post); }); }); }); It's connecting, being authenticated as the correct user, and running the exact same code as before but on the same server. This is not working:

var server =
  require('mongodb').Server;
server.connect(uri, function(err, server) {
  var db = server.getDB('blog_db');
  db.username = 'root'; db.password = '...';
  db.dbname = 'blog_db'; db.collection('posts', function(err, posts) { posts.insert({title: '
