The actor came to prominence as a contestant on the second series of I'm A Celebrity … Get Me Out Of Here! in 2014, but was widely recognised for his role in the spoof British drama Moone Boy, which followed the adventures of a time-travelling alien, played by the writer/director James Murphy, on the streets of Glasgow. Cruickshank was diagnosed with cancer last year, but he had been working on the third series of the show for more than a year. However, he died suddenly in his Glasgow flat on Sunday. A statement released by the BBC said: "We are deeply saddened to announce that Andrew Cruickshank has passed away. "Andrew had a rare form of cancer. It was very aggressive, and has now metastasised to his bones, lungs and liver." Aftonbladet quoted Sarah Lawrie, his mother, as saying she wanted the family to receive the news privately. "Andrew will not want me to talk about this," she said. Cruickshank, who was born in Greenock, was a geography and politics graduate of Glasgow University. He trained at the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland, and worked as a floor manager at Glasgow's Ibrox Stadium before becoming an actor. Moone Boy was broadcast by BBC2 in 2015 and featured actors including Iwan Rheon, Sophie Okonedo and Matthew MacFadyen. Earlier this year, Cru

Anthocyanins in adzuki beans were purified and quantified. The crude anthocyanin fraction of adzuki beans was obtained from a 30% (v/v) aqueous ethanol extract by liquid-liquid partition, and the anthocyanin content in the extract was 1.8-1.9% (w/w). This anthocyanin fraction was further purified by adsorption on hydrated silica gel and preparative TLC. By these steps, the anthocyanin fraction in adzuki beans was purified and 14 anthocyanin components in the fraction were quantified. The anthocyanin composition of adzuki beans was investigated by HPLC-MS/MS. These anthocyanins consisted of three cyanidin-based anthocyanins, namely, malvidin-3-glucoside (71.1%), malvidin-3-rutinoside (17.2%), and malvidin-3-glucoside-6-malonyl-beta-glucoside (11.4%), which has not been reported in adzuki beans, and six peonidin-based anthocyanins, namely, peonidin-3-glucoside (39.4%), peonidin-3
