Dopaminergic agonist therapy: clinical and mechanistic considerations in Parkinson's disease. Long-term motor responses to L-Dopa and other dopaminergic agonists is generally somewhat more prolonged in Parkinson's disease (PD) than in normal subjects. The basic dosing strategy is to balance the problems of adverse effects (e.g., l-Dopa-induced dyskinesias and mood changes) with the problem of wearing off. The newer nonergoline dopamine agonists appear to have a better side effect profile and longer duration of action than L-Dopa. A combination of "priming" with L-Dopa and the newer dopamine agonists can provide high and stable response levels.

Hutchinson education chief faces recall after being criticized for cardigan, sunglasses and bow tie This article is more than 1 year old This article is more than 1 year old An Arkansas school superintendent who was criticized for wearing a bow tie and a cardigan has announced his resignation. The resignation of Adolphus Busch IV is effective immediately, and his successor will be named by the Arkansas board of education and the district's teachers' union, the two parties announced Wednesday. Adolphus Busch IV bows to demands to resign over controversial bow tie Read more Busch became embroiled in a social media-sparked furor when it became known in July that he was wearing a bow tie and a cardigan - which is what Busch later said he was told by the district's human resources department was required for a superintendent. While most people were wearing the clothing of the day, Busch, the principal of Hutchinsonville school, bucked the trend. "Unfortunately, Adolphus is the poster child for what happens when a system is set up to fail
