"This summer is a classic example of what we want for our highway system - a near-daily traffic volume that supports a 50-to-1 travel time balance through eight hours without exceeding 65 mph and one that supports the travel of up to nearly 200,000 cars per day at any time during peak commute hours," said Kevin T. Fox, North Carolina Department of Transportation Secretary. "We are counting on all drivers to practice safe and sensible driving, as well as lower traffic speeds, throughout this July 4th weekend." If you are planning to travel this summer, you'll find that for the most part, the North Carolina Transportation System (NCDOT) traffic system will be performing well. However, there will be areas that will experience heavier than average traffic volume - specifically, major and major arterial routes such as I-40, I-77, I-95, and I-85 in the Charlotte area; the US-21 and US-74 corridors between Charlotte and Greensboro; and major routes within the Triangle, including US-1, US-280, US-16, and both I-40/US-74 and I-85/US-70 in the Raleigh area. The goal is to maintain similar traffic volumes on the major highway segments and the Triangle's side streets, while bringing the state's average speed on the major highway segments down to 55 mph or less. NCDOT will have improved peak travel times between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Thursday, Friday, and Monday and between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Saturday, Sunday, and Tuesday compared to the same periods last year. "This summer is a classic example of what we want for our highway system - a near-daily traffic volume that supports a 50-to-1 travel time balance through eight hours without exceeding 65 mph and one that supports the travel of up to nearly 200,000 cars per day at any time during peak commute hours," said Kevin T.
