the cabin of the mega cab is the same as that of the crew cab: it's a three-across arrangement with a center console separating the driver from the front seat. the driver's seat is a little bit higher than in the crew cab, but otherwise, the seating arrangements are similar. the mega cab is outfitted with a power tilt and telescoping steering wheel, though the seat and pedals were not adjustable. the mirrors are fixed in place, though they fold down to allow a full view of the dashboard. the mega cab comes with a six-speaker bose audio system and a usb port for charging devices and media. both the passenger and driver seats of the mega cab were comfortable enough for a one-hour drive, though both offered more lumbar support than i would have liked. the center console had a bit of a hump, but the limited cargo capacity made it easy to access all the controls. the seats offer good lateral support, which is important if you're driving a long distance over rough terrain. ram trucks are available in both crew cab and mega cab models, the latter of which comes in all-wheel-drive (awd) and four-wheel-drive (4wd) varieties. both are available in one-ton, 2-ton, and 3-ton configurations. the ram 1500 4-door mega cab is the most popular truck in the segment, and the option that will be most familiar to truck buyers, especially those who are accustomed to the popularity of the pickup truck segment in recent years. it is the safest truck in its weight class, with standard airbags for the driver and front passenger seats and driver knee airbag on higher-end models.
