Extractor 2.4 32 BEST

extracting extra gas is much more efficient by grouping up your liberators and extractors. the right side anti-air is only slightly more effective than the left side anti-air, but the extra liberators on the left side mean less liberators on the right side. if you have 4 liberators and 5 extractors, extract 3 from the liberators (they still have the "extracting minerals" icon, but don't show up on the minimap), and 2 from the extractors, placing one on each side. if you want to take the second expansion, then do the same for the tal'darim. extracting resources from the tal'darim's base is less efficient, and only really worthwhile if you have way more liberators than extractors. at the time of writing, however, it seems that they are not using their "nearby resource extraction" ability and thus a liberator will have to take all the extractors in one go. i would not recommend it, but you can try it if you want. while you are extracting from the tal'darim base, the liberators can help defend your base by destroying the units trying to take it. depending on how many liberators you have, it is also recommended that you start placing them next to the extractors and outside of your base to help with the defense. to cut down on money lost to software piracy, the openexr group worked to standardize file formats. this resulted in a standardized container for images, called the openexr file format. the openexr file format supports high-quality images, and the resulting file sizes are considerably smaller than competing formats such as jpeg and tiff. openexr files may be read by most existing image viewing software, and while they are generally smaller than competing formats, they are just as feature-rich. so far, the openexr format has been adopted as the standard image format by most of the major software companies that make image viewers. the openexr format is now available as a standard image format for jpeg 2000. in addition, openexr supports the jpeg 2000, jpeg xr and png file formats.

if you have access to a surveyor, you can place it in the corner of the map (outside of your base) and it will take the extractor from the left and bring it to the corner of the map as well. the right corner of your base will be very useful if you are building extractors on the left, because it will take your extractors and bring them to the right side of the base, where you can take the novabackup extractors, just like in the picture below. a surveyor takes 2 novabackup extractors and can be used by 1 of your 5 (or less) extractors. once you get access to the extractors for novabackup, you should immediately take one in the center-center, because it will take it from the left and bring it to the center of the base, where you can keep it and move it to the side of your base if you are in need.

with novabackup extractors, you can have at least 1 per base, but it can be more if you want. you will be able to get 5 extractors with novabackup, and you can take 2-3 at a time in the center-left and one on the right side of the base. the left side of the base is more useful for having a liberator defending your left, while the right side of the base can be used for having liberators defending your right and the center-left.

the nova, in case you didn't know, is a family of machines that can be built by the player. they are the common anti-aircraft sniper of reaper's dominion and are loaded with high tech machinery to ensure that a player can extract an area of a map in a manner that cannot be done by the player or a bot. the nova is fairly easy to design, but takes quite a bit of time to construct. just build the worktable in your base, and then you can design the rest of the machine.
