Downloadolevelmathsgreenbookfree Popular Posts In a normal post you upload an article and title for it with no tags or categories added. Now let's say you have ten articles. When you post them you would put the article title and then tags and category assigned to each article. It's not long though to get into a huge amount of tags and categories. Instead we are going to post all the tags and categories in one category called "Other" and assign that to the post. So if we had 10 posts or articles and one of them has the tags "tag1" and "tag2" assigned to it. We will post the category for both "tag1" and "tag2" in one category called "Other" and then when we show the tags we'll have an actual list of tags that we have posted and not just a number. Here's a quick example of how it would work post title:sample tags:tag1,tag2 tag2 cat:other tag1 cat:other tag2 cat:other tag1 cat:other post title:sample2 tags:tag1,tag2 tag1 cat:other tag1 cat:other tag2 cat:other tag2 cat:other tag1 cat:other post title:sample3 tags:tag1,tag2 tag2 cat:other tag1 cat:other tag2 cat:other tag2 cat:other tag1 cat:other We should be able to easily get posts that have either of these tags on them as well as keep track of which posts have them and which ones don't. We also don't have a huge number of category tags now. How to Get the Old Post When you get tagged in this article put "subscribed" as the meta description box for your post as well as whatever tags that post has. Take the tags that you have submitted to your post. If they have images related to them I would put in the description box and also put the url of the image. So if someone wants to subscribe to your tags they will get a notice on their homepage and also the url to the images. I like to run this through a separate feed every time I post something so I have no reason to think other people aren't doing this already. Of course you can run this against any page of tags you want. An example of a feed could be Tags:tag1,tag2,tag3 url:tag1 url:tag2 url:tag3 Create an HTML Page for the Feed First create an html page just for this feed and create a new section in your HTML. Create a title which shows up in the head of your HTML. 5ec8ef588b
