Checkout pages must be simple, user-friendly, clear and offer compelling products. In checkout design, the checkout page should be short but informative for the user to fill out the required information correctly. When it comes to checkout page design, you should avoid making the checkout form complex. If its too easy, customers will not buy from your business. Clear checkout form is an essential feature of one-page checkout process. This is basically to differentiate between the online and offline merchants. Additionally, it ensures that your customers complete the checkout form properly. Today, the checkout process forms an integral part of any online store. But, there is no such trend in the present. However, most of the customers abandon the checkout process due to the long checkout process, despite its benefits. This issue can be caused if some of your custom fields are not categorized as required fields on the CP(Component Profile) page. This can be caused if the required fields were not checked as mandatory in Customizing->Component profile->Required fields. Because of this problem the checkout wasn't working for some of the customers, we had to do a manual update, unfortunately we can't automate this part due to this, the store owner is required to manually provide the site URL and the email address. The simplified checkout has been updated to give more flexibility to configure the fields, for example you can reorder the layout, and can use 'has many' for one-to-many relationships. You can also add additional custom fields, such as customer name or email address.

The overwhelming majority of people will abandon their cart without completing the checkout process. An estimated 2.7 billion items are abandoned at online stores, giving a reach of $2.1 trillion in revenue. This may seem like a dramatic increase, but there is more to it than just increased registrations. The real gain is that abandoned items bring a high return, resulting in a significantly higher ROI than webinars and Facebook ads. The final checkout process can be a customer's first impression, so you should do your best to help them with it. To help make it easier and more user-friendly, go to Tools > Checkout > Pre-Order Shipping and select your desired shipping method. For a single step checkout (e.g. skip registration and start checkout), remember that every step needs to be completed correctly. Otherwise, your customer will receive a new reminder to complete their order. This is a great opportunity for checkout errors, as it's as easy as possible for the user to make a mistake. It's especially important that you have a way to correct these errors, as many buyers will need to go back and try again. Nearly 80% of abandonments are due to errors in the checkout process. Whether you're using a third-party checkout or a self-hosted one, you should have a fail-safe to prevent cart abandonment. At the very least, your checkout should allow the user to correct their address and re-submit it if they've made a mistake. A few other things you should provide are: a way for customers to unsubscribe if they change their mind, payment methods to ensure all options are available, and a link to your privacy and security policy. You should also make sure you inform your customers that you have no way of recovering payments and that they should only complete their order if they're sure they want to purchase. Shopping carts are an excellent tool for coming up with ideas, but if you don't have a solid plan, they can be an extremely costly mistake. 5ec8ef588b
