[SoftHouseChara] Shinobi Ryuu. The page you are trying to access is reserved for registered users only., a padlock will only open if the correct password is entered. So, it's the same kind of situation as a password, and yet it's a different kind of security because the single shared secret, the padlock, ensures reliability. 12. We use the Security Context Access Security Tool (SCATS) to do penetration tests, for example to check for SQL injection vulnerabilities. This tool is used to protect applications, so that a malicious application can't gain access to sensitive information. But the attacker can still try to exploit a database, and the SCATS plugin is then used to protect against this attack. We have a plugin for our SQL Server product, and we have a plugin for MySQL as well.
SCATS is very effective. We have tools to attack individual applications and our own SCATS tools. 13.
If I remember correctly, we looked at a Windows binary that included a Java class. The class was used by another application and they used the security context access protection mechanism, so that they could read files that were protected as part of the operating system. We found a way to inject a malicious class that allowed access to information that was not supposed to be accessed. We eventually found a way to delete the file that was protected. 14. We built a tool for handling Windows SSIS packages. We found that when an application was configured to use the Protection Level Full, the database could be exposed to the attacker, so we fixed the issues with the 04aeff104c
