expansion possible? In a function that receives a parameter pack, is it possible to recurse over some of that parameter pack? Suppose I have a function that takes a parameter pack and I'd like to use one of those parameters for another call of the same function. Is this possible? void some_function(const char *a, const char *b,...); void some_function(const char *a, const char *b) { int i = 2; const char *y = a; some_function(y, b, i); }

For the above example, is it possible to get it to output: `some_function(aaa, bbb, 2); some_function(aab, bbb, 2); some_function(aac, bbb, 2); some_function(aad, bbb, 2);` I've tried various things, but none seem to actually expand. Each call of `some_function()` has its own `char *'s`, so it's very difficult to model the expanded result. A: Simplest
